UMBRELLA STUDIES.

New Way of Studying the Character of Your Friends. notice on a rainy day. It is the way in which the manner of carrying an ambrella reflects the character of the individual. Most men, indeed, have a stereotyped common-place way of bearing the emblem of our civilization; they grasp the umbrella by the lower most extremity of its handle, extending the thumb upward on the inner side, and tipping the umbrella backward a jittle so that a considerable portion of its waight bears men this thumb. This is weight bears upon this thumb. This is a very good way to carry an umbrella, and the Boston Transcript Listener, in the course of a tolerably long walk in the rain, noticed about four out of five men carry it that way. The fifth is apt to seize it squarely about the handle, without any upturned thumb; and, what is a rather unaccountable thing, four out of five women carry it

Why should men tend to stick up their thumss on umbrella handles, while women do not! The Listener will not undertake to account for it any more than he will for the fact, which he had also noticed, that the male sex, which ordinarily is in all things less perceptive and sagacious than the female sex, tends to project an umbrella in the direction from which the rain or the sun comes, and thus get the maximum of protection for the body, while women have a tendency to hold an umbrella or parasol a tendency to hold an umbrella or parasol in a fixed direction always, either straight up or over one shoulder, permitting access to a good deal of storm and sun which might be excluded.

The actual ideoxyncracies of individuals in the matter of carrying umbrellas, however, are more easily accounted for. Some individuals are bound to be very individual, and such have a strictly individual way of carrying an umbrella, as well as of doing every thing else. Some hold it with a grasp well toward the top of their heads. Some put it back over their shoul-Some put it back over their shoulders, and march through a crowd regard less of consequent collisions. Others run to less of consequent collisions. Others run to the opposite extreme, and carry it edge-wise, in order not to incommode anybody, and so manage to get the ribs of their um-brellas entangled with umbrellas and clothes of half the passers-by, and others put it away up in the air, in a lordly way, above the tops of all other umbrellas.

FRACTIONAL CURRENCY.

General F. E. Spinner on the Genesis of the Shin-Plaster. General F. E. Spinner on the Genesis of the Shin-Plaster.

General F. E. Spinner in Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union: You are quite right in regard to the origin of the postal currency. When all the silver had been paid out of the Treasury of the United States early in 1862 I procured from the Post-Office Department quantities of postage stamps for the purpose of making change—my recollection now is that at that time 5 and 10-cent stamps were the only kinds in use. So, to facilitate the making of change, I had the stamps pasted on slips of paper so as to make 25 and 50 cents. This was done after an agreement with Mr. Montgomery Blair, the then Postmaster General, that he would redeem them in that condition in postage stamps, It was soon found that this mode of procedure was impracticable.

I then persuaded the Postmaster-General to procur, the engraving and printing of lac-similes of the postal compound postage stamps. These the Treasurer bought from the Postmaster General under an agreement that the Post-Office Department would redeem them. This was what were called the content of the postage of the postage stamps.

ment that the Post-Office Department would redeem them This was what was called "postal currency" and is the kind you in-quire about in your letter. Inclosed here-with you will find a sample of this kind of currency You will notice that it was made redeemable in postage stamps only

The Postmaster General soon became tired of the additional care, responsibility and labor that the issuing and redemption of this currency threw upon his office, and he urged that the Treasury should relieve him from it. I then procured the passage of a law by Congress for the printing of a currency which would represent the frac-tions of the dollar. These were engraved and printed in denominations of 3, 3, 10, 15, 25 and 50 cent notes, and in contra-distinct tion to the postal currency were called frac tional currency, and were receivable for all Government dues.

How the "Japs" Sleep. A Yokohama letter in the Hartford Cour ant says "The Japanese bed is simply a futon spread upon the matting. They he upon this and spread another futon over themselves and rest their heads upon wooden pillows and are happy A futon is a thickly wadded cotton quilt, exactly like our comfortable, and a very nice arrangement such a bed is for the housekeeper. The bed is easily made, and in the morning the futon is folded and put away in a closety and the chamberwork is done. They wear no night-dresses, but as every person, even in the poorest and humblest station, takes a hot bath once, and in the majority of cases twice a day, there is nothing uncleanly in the wearing of the same dress at night which is worn in the day."

Tough on His Substitute.

A Hartford clergyman tells this anecdote: Early in life, while occupying another charge, he invited a clergyman whom the unregenerate would call conceited and dull to preach in his pulpit. During the sermon our Hartford preacher dozed away in the sweet old way until he was suddenly called on to conclude the service with prayer. Accustomed to regard himself as the humblest of his Creator's instruments, and forgetting that he had not delivered the sermon, he began with: "We beseech Thee to accept the weak and feeble effort that has been addressed to Thee, and more richly to endow Thy servant in the graces he so greatly lacks."

parents.' A Wrinkle on Wrinkles It is customary to say that wrinkles come

It is customary to say that wrinkles come from worrying, but the truth is that most of them come from laughing. To know how to laugh is just as important as to know when to do it. If you laugh with the sides of your face the skin will work loose in time and wrinkles will form in exact accordance with what kind of laugh you have. The man who always wears a smirk will have a series of semi-circular winkles covering his cheeks. When a gambler, who has been accustomed to suppressing his feelings, laughs, a deep line forms on each feelings, faughs, a deep line forms on each side of his nose, and runs to the upper corner of his mouth. In time this line ex tends to his chin and assumes the shape of a half moon. A cadaverous person with a wax-like skin is very apt to have two broadly-marked wrinkles, one running up from the jaw and the other under the eye. These meet at right angles at the cheek These meet at right angles at the cheek bone and look as though they formed a knot at the apex. The scholar's wrinkles form on his brow, while the scheming politician's cone round his eyes, where they look for all the world like the spokes of a wheel.

how a cub was cared for by its parents in a bear pit. He writes:

"As there was a deep basin filled with water in the pit, I summoned assistance and had some large pieces of joists dropped into it to serve as floats if the cub should happen to fall into the water. At the first splash of the timber the female gave an angry snort and darted into the inner den slowly followed by the male, but as soon as we had finished and all became quiet they returned and proceeded with much caution to fish all the lumber out of the tank and strew it all over the floor of the pit. night, after they retired, the door of the inner den was closed, the keepers ventured in, removed the lumber, and I concluded it would be best not to interfere again but to trust to bear wisdom in the future.

Several days elapsed before it made the attempt to come out into the oner nit and when it finally did him. the open pit, and when it finally did so it crawled along to the front grating and nestled between its mother's front paws, who was squated on her baunches, as was her usual custom. As it gained strength it began to play around her, but she never seemed to give herself any conceru about it and allowed it to wander about as it wished. Finally it began to approach as it wished. Finally it began to approach the male and attempt to seduce him into a frolic, but the old fellow re mained stolid and indifferent, until one day it gave him a sharper nip, en arriere, than usual, when he whirled with an angry grunt and made a pass at it with one of his front paws. The youngster was too nimble for him and galloped off to the back of the nit and what I had been any back of the pit, and what I had been any iously expecting occurred. The tank was placed well in the rear of the pit, with only a narrow ledge between it and the back wall. In hurrying along it the youngster lost his balance and pitched headforemost into the water. At the noise of the splash there was a simultaneous rush of both male and female, and as soon as the cub's head appeared four great paws were passed underneath him and he was gently lifted out of the water. While coughing and spluttering from the effects of his sud den bath, his mother thrust her nose under neath him and gave him a toss which landed him close to the door of the inner den. He did not wait for a repetition of the operation, but gathered himself up and darted out of sight. What a pitful roar the female turned and pitched into the male, giving him a most unmerciful drubbing, and I walked away perfectly sure that drown-Thursday Ev'ng, July 4th. ing would never be the cause of that young ster's death. THERE are a great many people who seem to believe that no public official can perform an act outside of the regular routine of his duties without being actuated by some ulterior motive. A short time ago Postmaster General Wanamaker sent a circular letter to about one hundred of the principal postoffices in the United States, asking the postmasters to inform him whether the business of their offices could be so arranged as to lighten the Sunday labors of the employes, and no sooner was this known than it was intimated that Wanamaker was trying to force religiou into the Postoffice Department and to graft Sabbatarianism upon that branch of the Government service.

The San Francisco Post says: Recently he has said just what his purpose is, not to disrupt the postal service, but to find out what can be done to lessen the hours of gal to take the work out of the comtoil with thousands of men all over the country, many of whom have . families with whom they like to spend at least a part of Sunday. Is this Sabbatarianism? If it is, it is a great pity there is not more of it all over the United States, for there are hundreds of employers who have no more consideration for the rest and comfort of their employes than they have for the machines they operate, and whose only regret is that their men have to take some time to eat and sleep

Because Mr. Wanamaker teaches a class in Sunday school it does not follow that he purposes converting every postoffice in the United States into a Sunday school. He is a thorough business man of many years standing, employing a great many people in his business, and he has learned the important lesson that it is vitally necessary that a man who works, whether with hand or brain, should have one day in every seven for rest. He reasons, and correctly, that for the United States to secure the best and most efficient service from those in its employment the same rule should be applied, and so he is making an investigation of the question which will probably result in the reorganization of the working torce in many of the postoffices, thereby securing more rest to the employes and better service for the department. This is the head and front of his offending, and no one will the sting of the gadfly, and who fancy that the friends and advocates of morality, good order and decency are banded together to deprive them of their so called natural rights. Fortunately, they are in a small minority and without influence. All sensible people in this country will approve of Mr. Wanamaker's action, and wish him success in his undertaking.

THE Chicago press has jibed poor old St. Louis about the smallness of her contribution to the Johnstown sufferers until patience no longer was a virtue, and the Post-Dispatch flings back this as pay:

When the homeless people of Chicago were dependent on the charity of other cities eighteen years ago, St. Louis sent them clothing and provisions by the train load, and $125,000 in cash. The only return she ever got was increasant trades of abuse from the Chicago press.

In the investigation of the Cronin mystery the torgetful witness is occoming abnormally numerous. When a witness professes inability to recall the main facts of a series of exceptional transactions in which he took a principal part, such a profession is apt to arouse a suspicion of prevarication, which, in a legal investigation, attains' to the dimensions of perjury.

There were groups of old soldiers to be seen everywhere on the streets or on the Hayes homestead. The wide hall, parlors and library are heavy with the perfume of flowers, tributes from public and private friends comrads in arms, of General Hayes, tributes from public and private friends, comrads in arms, of General Hayes, and military a d civic organizations. Among the great number of arrivals to-day were a magnificent pillow of white lilies and maiden hair ferns, from the President and Mrs. Harrison; a cross of ivy on a base of lilies from the national organization of the W. C. T. U., and an easel of flowers from the Woman's Corps of the Department of Ohio. The Lucy Hayes Mission Band, consisting of fifty-seven white roses, one for each year of the life just closed, a most beautiful piece, came from the Woman's Home Missionary Society, of the Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Hayes was President.

The funeral services, which were of a simple and unostentatious character and of a private rather than a public occasion, opened with the reading of the 23d psalm by Mrs. Hayes' pastor, Rev. J. M. Mills, of the Methodist Church, followed by the hymn 'My Jesus, as Thou Wilt,'' read by C. E. Barnes, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, then singing by the quartette choir. A prayer was then offered by Rev. D. R. Boshford of the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Deleware, Ohio. A second bymn followed, read by Rev. N. Shupp of the Evangelical Church. Rev. L. D. McCabe, LL. D., who performed the marriage ceremony for extresident Hayes and wife, then Rev. L. D. McCabe, LL. D., who performed the marriage ceremony for exivesident Hayes and wife, then delivered a brief funeral address Rev. James I. Swander of the Reformed Church then read a hymn, beginning "God be with you till we meet again," which was rendered by the choir. Rev. M. Long of the Evangelical Lutheran Church then repeated the Lord's prayer, closing with simple, impressive services. ing with simple, impressive services. Opportunity was then given the throng of sympathizing visitors from abroad to view the body. The funeral cortege then took up the line of March to the Oakwood cemetery, where the interment took release.

The body was arrayed in a dress of The body was arrayed in a dress of ivory cream satin with white passementre and lace triumnings. The dress was made for Mrs. Hayes while she was in the White House. Her appearance was most lifelike. Her illness was so short and her death so sudden there was but little emaciation. The face is pale, but there is a trace of rose tolor in her cheeks. Her closed eyes are not sunken and there is a smile on her lips. The Postoflice, banks and other business houses are closed this afternoon. There was a very large number at the funeral.

DANIEL WEBSTER

Great Constitutional | Expounder Rather Expensive.
The following story of Daniel Webster, illustrative of his winning personal traits, told by a leading local lawyer, is believed to have never been made public. Years ago the late Erastus Corning, as a comparatively young man, made Mr. Webster's acquaintance somewhat intimately. As the re sult of the friendship it turned out that the former indorsed Mr. Webster's bank note for a considerable sum. When the note fell due protests came to the firm and they paid the note. Knowing Mr. Webster's impecuniosity and not wishing to crowd him, they did not call upon him for security. After some years, and when it was supposed that Mr. Webster's financial condition was much improved, Mr. condition was much improved, Mr. Corning, at the instance of the firm, wrote, asking Mr. Webster if he could make it convenient to pay the claim. The answer was a courteous note from Mr. Webster, making excuses that just at present he could not neet the demand, and ending up by a pressing invitation for Mr. Corning to visit him later, when he would probably be able to pay, or at least to secure the claim. satisfactorily.

The firm advised Mr. Corning to accept the invitation, which he did. On his return Mr. Corning came home deliabled with the heads of the control of the corning came home deliabled with the corner of his corner of the corner his return Mr. Corning came home de-lighted with the pleasures of his visit, and entertained his partners with glowing accounts of the great states-man's hospitalities and descriptions of the charming incidents of the sojourn, in which he ignored the business ob-ject which partly impelled his visit. Finally, after he had exhausted his description of the visit one of Mr. Cordescription of the visit, one of Mr. Corning's friends said: "Well, I suppose Mr. Webster was pleased because he could pay the note?" "Pleased to pay the note?" said Mr. Corning, "he not only didn't pay the note, but he so charmed me that he got me to sign another for $5.000, and I am thankful he didn't ask me to make it $10,000, for I don't think I could have resisted his request." Mr. Corning is said to have had a subsequent invitation to Chicage.

Theodore Winters' California crack El Rio Rey performed a wonderful feat at Washington Park, Chicago, last Wednesday. It was in the second race, and the handsome Chestnut was making his bow before the Chicago grandstand. His competitors were Sunder land, Ted, Lord Peyton, Aunt Kate, Extravagance and Lizzie Fonso. If El Rie had not stumbled while he was getting under way there is no telling how far he would have beaten his field. Although the last away and the pace was of the hottest kind, the California beauty was leading at the head of the stretch, but Extravagance and Lord Peyton, who were both heavily backed, gave the favorite a hard tussle all the way down the home run. A furlong from home it looked as if Lord Peyton would be stretch the stretch with the s from home it looked as if Lord Peyton would prove the victor. Winchell drew his whip and struck El Rio Rey twice. He slid out from it, finishing with a wonderful burst of speed, beating Lord Peyton three parts of an open length, Extravagance a good third. The time. 1:08, was very fast, and considering the fact that El Rio Rey was practically left at the post, his performance equals any ever made at that distance. The record is 1:06½. Over 15,000 head have dready been driven to Montana this Spring, and more are going. But as it will be impossible to subsist so much stock there, in addition to that already there, the consequence will be that much of it will be taken across the boundary line into the Northwest Territories. The Owyhee range, our informant says, will have to be left to the sheep men.

News has been received from Union, n Eastern Oregon, of the killing of the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, on Lyon's Hill, by William Michael, aged seventeen years. Michael shot the girl between the eyes, killing her instantly. He says she shot herself, but has already told two stories as to how it occurred. The girl's little brother, aged five years, was the only witness to the deed. He says: "Michael pointed a revolver at me sister's head and it went off; my sister fell over. He told me not to tell how it happened." An increase was how it happened." An inquest was held yesterday, but the verdict is not yet rendered.

Messrs. Schneider & Co., Creuso France, have patented a process which consists of making, in a blast furnace, a cupola or a reverberatory furnace, castings having a variable proportion of copper, with a proportion likewise variable, of the ordinary constituents of cast iron. The copper constituents of cast iron. The copper castings are used for the manufacture of the copper steels which serve for the preparation of articles such as sheathing and armor for vessels, cannons, projectiles, bed-plates, steam-cylinders, roll, etc., the articles when desired being case-hardened and hardened in oil. Copper ore is mixed with the charge in the blast furnace, or copper alloys with the charge in the cupols. Also copper filings can be mixed with coal to form a copper-coke which is used for heating the blast furnace or cupola; or copper comblast furnace or cupols; or copper com-pounds can be melted in a reverbera-tory furnace, with a mixture of steel or iron, under a layer of anthracite to prevent oxidation.

WHEN TO BATHE,

And How to Keep the Skin Soft and Complexion Clear.
The London Lancet says: The best time to bathe is just before going to bed, as any danger of catching cold is avoided, and the complexion is hours after having the bath. A couple of pounds of bran put into a thin bag and then in the bathtub is excellent for softening the skin. It should be left to soak in a small quantity of water several hours before being used. The internal sids to a clear complexion are most of them well known. The old-fashioned remedy of sulphur ard molasses is con-

WOMAN'S CROWNING GLORY.

The Proper Way of Cleaning, Drushing and Drushing the Hair.

A rich mass of hair that when uncoiled can easily be sat upon by the fortunate possessor is a beenty of itself, yet, strange to say, it has less to do with producing the effect of beauty than almost any other attribute. Complexion, eyes, nose, mouth, all count for more in the general summing up ming up.

It is strange, too, writes Ella Rodman Church in Harper's Bazar, to note how frequently this gift is found where there is an entire absence of all other personal attraction; and among German women of the working class, who are exceptionally plain, great masses of thick braids often cover the entire back of the head. A German prescription for premoting the growth of the hair is to wash it thoroughly once a week with the yelk of an egg well rubbed of the hair is to wash it thoroughly once a week with the yelk of an egg well rubbed in among the partings, and afterward to rinse it off with cold soft water. A thorough drying and vigorous brushing complete the operation, which is one that working women would scarcely take the time to indulge in.

This formulae in.

This formulae has been improved by the addition of half a tea-cup of ammonia, a table-spoonful each of oil of bergamot and melted toilette soap (pure white Castile or palm), a teaspoonful of powdered borax, and a quart of rain-water, to be thoroughly mixed and kept in a covered jar for a mixed and kept in a covered jar for a monthly washing of the scalp. This is often enough for purposes of cleanliness, and better for the hair, as frequent wash-and better for the hair, as irrequent washing injures the young growth.

The egg should first be beaten to make it blend and rub in better; and before washing it is well to braid long hair in several braids, as this precaution keeps it from tangling. Braids and scalp should be thoroughly dried with a coarse towel, and as assisted by sitting for an hour or so in the sun or by a fire.

Perfect cleanliness and patient brushing are recommended as the best restoratives for the thinning and breaking of the hair which is sure to follow the excessive use of comades, many of which are highly inpurious, and the piling up of hair on one head which grew on another. Much of the hair of commerce has been taken from the dead, and it heats and irritates the heads to which it is transferred. This, with the use of applications containing chemicals, has a most disastrous tendency, and many of the victims "have a crown where the hair straggles thinly over a painfully blushing skin, and partings that assume in their frightened eyes, as they look in the glass, the proportions of the gates of Gaza, or have a stubble of short wiry coarse growth, inclined to bristle up, and giving an infinity of trouble to keep in decent order."

Some toilette tables fairly bristle with bottles, boxes and jars containing "dressings" innumerable for the unfortunate locks, which thrive best, if one did but know it, without any dressing whatever but that administered by a well-made, moderately stiff brush, varied by an occasional application of the hands. The latter gives a satiny gloss; and a country lady, whose hair always had a particularly neat, shining appearance, was once detected in the act of 3. Song by the Choir.

The color of hair has much to do with its beauty, and as a general thing the golden blonde is the most popular. Fortunate is she on whom nature has lavished these shining tresses, which give the possessor such a peculiarly youthful appearance. Many have been the attempts to imitate Many have been the attempts to mitate them with art, but such attempts are sure to terminate disastrously. Occasionally the lovely color is retained even beyond middle age, but ordinarily it is as evanescent as the youth it represents, and the golden haired girl of sixteen frequently becomes the brown-haired matron of thirty.

Miss Goldilocks has unconsciously lifted her red-haired sisters out of their Cinderher red-haired sisters out of their Cluderella ashes, or those of them whose hair is on the russet rather than the orange tint, "the color of perfectly ripe corn," for the reason that hair of this peculiar shade comes next in beauty to the true cheecluse dorce. It, is not only beautiful, but distinguished looking. "Enter a room in daylight," says a writer on the tollette, "where there are women without bonnets or hats, and if there be one of them with bright, unmistakable red hair she will stand out from the rest with a never-failing prominence, which, if she be a pretty woman—and red-haired women have often great beauty of which, if she be a pretty woman—and red-haired women have often great beauty of feature and very often lovely complexions—is of the greatest advantage to her, actually speaking." An approach to the desirable tint may be obtained by using a preparation com-pounded of half a pint of rose water and three ounces of clean powdered gum-arabic, mixed and strained, after which one drop of aniline red should be added to give it a of aniline red should be added to give it a rosy tinge. This is also recommended to make the hair curl easily.

The worst hair—which is usually in streaks or patches of color—can be vastly improved by avoiding every thing like a stiff or conventional arrangement, whatever the fashion may be. Such hair should be loose and fluffy, in large waves and careless twists—not untidy, but picturesque. This causes the light to strike it in such a way that the inequalities of color are not. way that the inequalities of color are not noticeable.

The ugly fashion of combing the hair from the neck to the very top of the head spoils the effect of the prettiest hair, and is becoming only to a small, perfectly shaped head. The bare apertures at the bucks of bonnets afford an excellent opportunity for the study of phrenology, and the many undesirable "bumps" thus exposed to view might never have been suspected but for the unnatural withdrawal of their proper covering.

PRETTY SCHOOL GROUNDS

A Constant Object Lesson to the Eyes of

A Constant Object Lesson to the Eyes of Every Boy and Girl.

For several months in the year a large proportion of the children of this country spend at least half of the hours of daylight, for five days of the week, in or about the school-house. At the most susceptible period of life the influence of these surroundings must in the aggregate be considerable, concludes Garden and Forest. A neat and tidy room, with simple and cheerful decorations, will be a constant object lesson to every eye. A room with decrepit furniture upon an unclean floor, and with ful decorations, will be a constant object lesson to every eye. A room with decrepit furniture upon as unclean floor, and with walls and ceiling broken and stained, will teach its lesson, too, in taste and morals, but it will be quite a different one. It is due to the health of children that they be supplied with abundant light and air. This means a detached bailding with ample open space about it, even in the city. Exercise is also essential to the healthy development, as well as to the happiness of children, and play is the natural and spontaneous exercise and refreshment for both their minds and bodies. A playground may, therefore, cise and refreshment for both their minds and bodies. A playground may, therefore, be considered a necessary adjunct to every school. Children will play wherever they have room, but it will hardly be argued that a bare space of earth, which will be dusty or muddy as the weather changes, offers every advantage that children should be able to derive from their school, grounds be able to derive from their school-grounds. If the school-room can be made to give lessons in cleanliness and order and taste the surroundings of the building should be arranged to enforce the same lessons.

That properly ordered school-grounds can aid in this direction, and, besides thus, be made an important educational auxiliary in some branches of natural science, was the thesis of an interesting paper read before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society by Mr. Leverett M. Chase, master of the Dud-ley-School, in Roxbury. Mr. Chase argued that the ideal school-ground should be separated into two distinct portions one devoted to the purposes of an outdoor gymnasium, and the other an area of green sward, properly planted with trees, shrubs, vines—in short, a pleasure-garden for the children. They should be taught that the garden is theirs, and a feeling of responsi-bility for it should be encouraged. That this sense of ownership will engender such a personal interest that the exuberant destructiveness, so often manifested by school boys, will give place to a sentiment of affection, and a desire to protect their shrues and flowers, has been proved in many in stances. If the plants are all carefully la-beled and catalogued; if the children are invited to aid in cultivating them, under proper direction, they will gain much prac-tical information as to the laws of plantgrowth, and if a serious attempt at systematic instruction in certain branches of botany is connected with the care of the grounds, many lessons which it would be an irksome task to acquire otherwise will be learned without effort, and even with positive delight. From the knowledge thus positive delight. From the knowledge thus gained, and the interest aroused in the school-garden, we may reasonably look for a growing love of nature—an increasing appreciation of the beauty of trees and their value. If this generation of children were reared under such influences ours would be a land of fair gardens in a country of a country. dens in a quarter of a century, and there would be no difficulty in securing proper extra touch to the front locks.

People who never indulge in an actual washing of the head, "for fear of taking cold," do not besitate to wet the hair frequently with bay-rum and other applications, although this is a surer way of taking cold than a brisk washing of the entire head and an equally brisk drying. The latter, too, is far more cleansing and invigorating, and with proper precautions there is no danger of any ill effects.

Gentle and regular friction is the heat of the Nation's forests, and the most intelligent care of the farmer's wood lot, will never be adopted until the interes and sympathy of the children are enlisted and generous sentiments as to the importance of trees and torests as an element of stimulant, also a homosopathic amount of ginning everywhere. A narrow border tincture of cantharides. Brisk rubbing of along the foundation of the school-house the scalp with a raw onion, and after this sa touch of honey, is said to work wonders; but all remedies are useless without regular and persevering brushing—fifty strokes might and morning, beginning at the very roots and going through the entire length of the hair.

and hide some unsightly object. At all cutting the ends of the hair once a month events, some house-plants can be used cutting the ends of the hair once a month of the control of the second o ers and trustees who must take the lead in this enterprise know so little themselves of the subjects in which it is proposed to in-terest the children. The beginnings of this will be feeble, and much honest effort will be misdirected. Unsuitable trees and shrubs will often be selected and they will shrubs will often be selected and they will be badly planted in improper places. But the very fact that the lack of knowledge on these points is so lamentable is the strong-est reason that a beginning should be made. The attempt will excite inquiry and criti-cism, and knowledge will come from the study and discussion thus aroused. Fortu-nate are those places already provided with nate are those places already provided with teachers like Mr. Chase, and Mr. Endicott, master of the Gibson School in Dorchester who, at the meeting above mentioned, added some valuable testimony to the soundness of the positions taken in Mr. Chase's paper.

A final suggestion made by Mr. Chase is worth considering in other States as well as in Massachusetts. It was that prizes be offered for the best-kept and most tastefully embellished school-grounds.

One Hundred Years Ago.

Fortunately there were no sewing machines then, except the busy fingers of ladies, who gave less time to personal adornment than now. The earliest invention to facilitate the process of sewing was that of Weisenthall in 1755. In his machine the needle was pointed at both ends and had an eye in the middle, so that it could be passed through the cloth both ways. Alsop's machine came next, in 1770, in which the shuttle was used; then followed the loop machine of Duncan, in 1804. In the Unifed States Granough, in 1842, took out a patent for a "machine to sew a straight seam," but Howe's, in 1846, was the first practical machine. The feature of Howe's machine was the needle with the eye in the point and the interlocking the threads by means of a shuttle. But the inventor could not have filled an order for a dozen of his machines for $500 apiece. It is doubtful if the sewing-machine has become a labor-saving machine, for, instead of using it to save time, it has increased the amount of sewing-machine was in. One Hundred Years Ago. of using it to save time, it has increased the amount of sewing done a thousand fold. While the sewing machine was introduced only about forty years ago, the sale of them new is nearly, if not quite, 750,000 a year, and more than thirty companies are engaged in their manufacture. Their cost has been greatly reduced since the expiration of the patents covering them. During the life of these patents a machine costing the manufacturer from $16 to $17 sold for from $90 to $100, and now sells for from $40 to $50.
